

Time Travel: Revisiting Lake Tahoe

Time Travel is a visual presentation of historical photographs of Lake Tahoe, from the 19th century through the mid-twentieth century, with the photographer's comparative view of the same location. Travel through time, blending history from the black and white past to the colorful present. Time, photography, and landscape change in remarkable ways.

This 25-year project of artist and Foundation Professor of Art Peter Goin is nearly complete with many historical images never before exhibited or published that were compiled with the support of a team of research assistants from the University of Nevada, Reno.

Peter Goin, Foundation Professor of Art at the University of Nevada, Reno, has spent the majority of his career in the great American outback that includes the Basin and Range country of northern Nevada and then exploring the jewel of the Sierra, Lake Tahoe.
